He asked her for her hand when she
Was very young and fair,
The summer in her soft blue eye,
Its sunlight on her hair,
But she was proud, and hade him win
Some need of gold and fame,
Before he came love's smile to seek,
Her guerdon kiss to claim.

And so from love and her he turned,
The better both to meet,
The way he took was strewn with shards,
That cut his pilgrim feet;
But upward still, fill through the years
That stole his life away,
Fame's sunshine fell at last upon
One great, and rich, and gray.

Ah, little of time's change they recked, Who parted long ago!

And love may not be bid and becked
To tarry and to go.

Afar she weeps who bade him climb—
She knows as well as he
The prize he spent his life to win
No guerdon now can be.

HOW I BECAME A BENEDICT

A STORY FOR OLD BACHELORS.

Yes, I'm a married man at last! That's my wife sitting over there in the great rocking-chair, that slender delicate creature, with the soft, creamy face, and lustrous, golden hair; and that queer little thing in her lap, over which she coos sotenderly, is my son and heir, Chancellor Trowbridge, Jr. Heavens! what a feeling of importance it gives a fellow to know that his name will live after his body is under the sods! I never knew what it was to be a man before; I'm one now, every inch of me, as Lear was overy inch a king.

A woman-hater! That's what I've been called all my life, and the cognome was not misapplied. I did hate women, and excluded mysolf from their society, and raide and succred at their frailties until—Well, until that little woman yonder glorified the whole feminine generate for me! I'm a changed man. I can't pass a bit of female apparel in a shop window, a water-fall, or a knot of ribbon, without a tender thrill at my heart. I'm an old fool, that's about the amount of it! No matter, fill up your meerschaum, my wife does not object to smoke—sensible expended the hoardings of an entire year to purchase me a new cloth suit, I thought my fortune made. As a matter of course, the next step to be taken was matrimony. By way of beginning, I set myself to work to get up a poem, and to be dedicated to the fair one of my choice, Miss y Jessie Weaver. The composition consumed a round week. Day after day I shut myself in my bed-chamber, and reaked my brains over rhyming syllables, while poor mother drove the cows to and from the store the poor mother drove the cows to and from all care and sorrow; and I shrank from pain, and only thought of milk-pans. At last it was finished, and elaborately copied on scented, rose-colored paper. There were some two dozen verses, I think, containing swashy sentiment, and morbid melancholy, sufficient to stock, a regiment of ordinary novels; but sitting on the stone steps of the dairy, with her butter-paddle in her hand, mother listened while I read them to her in a confident, declamatory style, her loving cyes full of the waves, and the moaning rustle of the branches overhead. Mother's cattle-bells inkled softly just below, and a solitary like and so were the maning rustle of the branches overhead. Mother's cattle-bells inkled softly just below, and a solitary like and so were the maning rustle of the branches overhead. Early potatoes bring a dollar to a dollar and fifty gents perbushel; and there are many farmers who clear every year the value of the land devoted to potatoes. We saw one farm, of two hundred acres, leased with buildings, on the half share plan, which netted the tenant, over his oxpenses for his own portion, the good sum of ten thousand dollars, and the produce was solely grass, corn, potatoes and wheat.

Tomatoes will eventually be a big thing. One grower sold in Boston the crop from a single acre for seven hundred dollars. Another sold the crop for an acre to a canning establishment for four hundred dollars—receiving but twenty-five cents perbasket. STANDARD WARRANTED.

WE offer to Farmers, the present Fall season, BAUGH'S RAW BONE SUPER PHOS-PHATE OF LIME as being highly improved.
Baugh's Raw Bone Super Phosphate, is as its ame indicates, prepared by dissolving Raw Bones in Oil of Vitriol—that is, Bones that have not been deprived of their organic matter—the grease and glue—by burning or baking. It therefore, presents to the nee of the Farmer all the valuable properties of Raw Bones in a highly concentrated form—rendering it at once quick in action and very permanent.

Farmers are recommended to purchase of the dealer located in their neighborhood. In sections where no dealer is yet established, the Phospharm may be procured directly from the undersigned.

Whatever be our earthly lot,
Wherever we may roam,
dill to our hearts the brightset spot
Is round the hearth at home;
the home where we received our birth,
The hearth by which we sat,
to other spot on all the earth
Will ever be like that.

When winter coming in its wrath Piled high the drifting snow, i afe clustered round the cheerful hearth We watched the firelight glow; No brighter seemed the ruddy flames Than did our hearts, the while A loving mother breathed our names With sweet approving smile.

When wearied with our eager chase Through many a tangled path. How sweet the dear accustomed place To take around the hearth; And still, when by our toll and care We feel ourselves oppressed, Our thoughts forever cluster there, And there alone find rest.

Bright promise of the rest above, Sweet shelter from the storm, Home, hallowed by a mother's love, Hearth by that love made warm; Though wildly roared the storm with What recked we of the cold, What place for silly fear or doubt Within that loving fold?

And when some little trouble weighed Upon the childish heart, Till from our brimming eyes it made The gushing teardrops start, How quick before that genial glow, We felt each sorrow cease, And back the crystal current flow, To flood our hearts with peace.

And brighter with the passing years Seems childhood's sweet employ, And even sweeter still appears Each well-remembered joy. Around the cheerful hearth at home, When we in childhood sat, No other apot where'er we roam, Will ever be like that.

Life is What we Make it.

The following article constitutes the leader" in a late issue of the Philadelphia Ledger. It is seldom that we meet with such an article in the editorial columns of our daily journals, or one containing more of sound philosophy than this:

of sound philosophy than this:

One of the most prolific sources of open complaint and secret discontent is the apparent inequality of the human lot in life. In proof of this, we are pointed to the outward differences so palpable to all. Wealth and poverty, health and sickness, education and ignorance, ability and feebleness, success and failure, certainly present very opposite appearances; but that they are either the fixed and inevitable lot of those who now possess them, or that they are either the fixed and inevitable lot of those who now possess them, or that they are themselves the true elements of life's happiness or misery, are erroneous, though very prevalent ideas. The truth that ought to be impressed on every mind, and especially upon the young, both to prevent repining, and to animate the energies to their fullest capacity, is that life is what we make it. Two men stand side by side, gazing on the same scene in nature. To one, who has a bright and cheerful disposition, it reveals only beauty and gladness; while to the other, gloomy and sad, the whole scene is spread over with a leaden pall. It is our own state of mind that creates for us, even Nature herself, and paints the same scene in beauty or in gloom.

Still more is our social world what we make it ourselves. The selfish and cold-

Nature herself, and paints the same scene in beauty or in gloom.

Still more is our social world what we make it ourselves. The selfish and coldhearted will ever find coldness and selfishness in others; the proud will be treated haughtily, the angry and passionate will receive rudeness and violence, and those who dishonor themselves will be dishonored by others. But society, to the good, the gentle, and the benevolent, is different. Their example wins others to similar virtues and devolops the germs of good, which, though they may be hidden, yet exist in every heart. From a man's estimate of society as a whole, we may gain a very fair knowledge of his own character, for as he is, so will others appear to ge because their purity, like the magnet, attracts the same quality in others; while the heart that is itself estranged from virtue, can find none elsewhere.

Equally true is it, that our world of signustrances and evert is what we are tue, can find none elsewhere.

Equally true is it, that our world of elementary who had numbered but five summers:

"Why, John, didn't you know that was Parson M.?"

"Yes, of course I did."

"Why did you not make a bow to him?"

"Why, mother don't belong to is church."

A Reporter recently lost a first-class. A Reporter recently lost a first-class item by want of forethought, according to a Boston paper. A young man attempted to jump from a train of ears which was approaching the city, and the Knight of the Peneil, with an eye to business, impruently requested his name, age, occupation and residence, for an obituary item. The young man concluded not to jump. The landlord of a hotel said to a boarder:—"Look c'here! I want you to pay your bill, and you must! I have asked you often enough for it, and I tell you now that you don't leave the house until you have paid it." "Good!" said the lodger, "Tll stay with you as long as I live."
